

I believe in this free market environment, a company should be able to do what it wants. I am paying for the satellite service and if terrestrial radio wasn't so cookie cutter, I would listen more to it.

This is really about a group of very large corporations afraid that their profits are going to shrink. Even if you cave in and let them get their way, more and more people will still move to satellite radio for the programming content that is offered.

It is by far way better than anything locally available.

Sincerely,

Tom yale
Middlebury, CT